

Harry Maziar

Harry Maziar's career combined family, business and community. He served as President of Zep Manufacturing Company, a division of National Service Industries, for 7 years. During his tenure, sales grew at a compound annual growth rate of 10.5% as Zep became an international leader in the specialty chemical industry. Mr. Maziar retired as Chairman of the Chemical Division of National Service, then a publically traded NYSE company.

Mr Maziar jokes that he has failed retirement as he has busied himself with both for-profit and not-for-profit endeavors. He serves on various business and community boards and participates as a principal in the Southtowne Automotive Group. He is or has been active in a variety of philanthropic and social programs including serving on the board of Junior Achievement Atlanta, The Humane Society, United Way, and Kennesaw State University where he continues to serve as the first Executive in Residence of the Michael J. Coles College of Business.

Mr. Maziar attended the University of Florida and The University of Georgia. He earned a BBA degree from Georgia State University and is a member of Blue Key and Beta Gamma Sigma National Honor Societies.

Additionally, he has been both President and Co-chairman of the Board of Governors at the Marcus Jewish Community Center of Atlanta. He was President of the Jewish Vocational Service, now an integral part of Jewish Family and Career Services. He has served as a board member of the William Breman Jewish Home, the Ahavath Achim Synagogue, the Jewish Community Centers of America and various professional associations. He currently serves as the Chair of the Southeast Regional Council for Birthright Israel.

Mr. Maziar has been married for 57 years to his wife Sherry. They have 3 children, and 8 grandchildren. He is a lifelong resident of Atlanta, Georgia.