Michael N. McGrann

Managing Principal, The TELOS Group

Over the last 25 years Mike has worked with family firms and family offices from across the world. He teaches and coaches in the areas of entrepreneurship, strategic planning, and family enterprising. He serves on the Board of several growing companies and is the founding partner of The TELOS Group, a consulting firm focused on growth and transition strategies for enterprising families. Mike has worked at several universities – and most recently he founded the Initiative for Family Business and Entrepreneurship at Saint Joseph's University in Philadelphia, PA. His work at these universities focused on the strategic ownership and management practices of privately held firms – and their requirements for long-term success. Mike conducts seminars for family businesses, executive education programs, and personalized educational workshops for companies around the world.

Mike has lived and worked in the Dominican Republic, Mexico, and Finland, and speaks Spanish. He holds an undergraduate degree in economics from Cornell, an MBA from Wharton School of Business, and an MA in International Studies, also from the University of Pennsylvania. He is married to Jen and they have four children, two cats and two dogs.
